

i am very concerned that ownership of all media will be concentrated in the hands of a few people. they will then control all the news we get, giving it whatever spin they choose, omitting what they don't like or agree with etc. this would be a disaster, especially in a country which prides itself on "freedom of the press". under this concentration (already occurring) there would be a free press in name only--only those in control of the media would be free to get all the news!! our government should not be in the business of consolidating our media in the hands of a few, wealthy people who can afford to buy it. our airwaves belong to all of us and should not be for sale to the highest bidder!!! there should be a limit (a small number!) on how many media (newspapers, television, radio) which can be owned by any one individual/company, so our media remains independent and truly free. then we will be a well informed public who can get all sides of any story and make decisions with all available facts. the voice of all should be heard, not just the voice of a few with influence!! less concentration in the hands of a few, not more, would be best.
